“Love Does Not Consider Consequences.”

[The video below is a clip from an interview previously recorded and uploaded to Shaun Attwood’s YouTube channel on September 26, 2020.]

Excerpts – David Icke:

“You know what love is today to so many people? It’s anti-hate... Anti-hate is not love. It’s just another version of hate... That’s why the anti-haters have hate in their face when they’re demanding we stop hating.”

###

“That’s what evil is. It’s the absence of love. We need to infuse it back. And part of that love is to not think about consequences for expressing love and speaking the truth, but doing it because it’s right.

“Love will always do what it knows to be right. And love does not consider consequences – because to consider consequences is to consider the very possibility that you will not do what you know to be right because of consequences. Love will never do that. It does what it knows to be right. It speaks its truth and it stands up for what it believes in.

“It doesn’t consider consequences. It considers consequences inconsequential. And the more people do that, the more this world will change.

“And the more people consider consequences, and keep backing down the alleyway to the wall at the end, the more this world will become more extreme than it is now. It’s our choice.”

The conversation includes a discussion of the deep deception involved in the “war on drugs” and the blocking of true healing, natural substances and information.
