German otorhinolaryngologist Dr. Bodo Schiffmann reports that his practice was raided by nine police officers. Police are charging that the physician is issuing unauthorized certificates to people so that they do not have to wear masks for the Chinese coronavirus.

Just over a week ago, RAIR reported that German police raided a birthday party for Dr. Bodo Schiffmann, a prominent critic of coronavirus lockdown measures. Evidently, police received a tip that one of the members of the party went to the bathroom without wearing a mask.

Dr. Schiffmann has indeed been very vocal against the use of masks as not only ineffective against the virus, but potentially dangerous. In the video, he states that there is "an overwhelming number of medical records out there that confirm that one is harmed by the masks, that they are of no use, and that more and more people are suffering from respiratory diseases since the introduction of the mask requirement, and from mycosis, lung congestion and the like."

One of the certificates police used to justify their search warrant, Dr. Schiffmann claims, is a "forgery." He says "you could see that clearly on the certificate," and still two others are from individuals they could not identify as patients. One gets the sense that the justification for the search warrant was “beefed up” with fake documents in order to make a more compelling case against Dr. Schiffmann.

So, hello and good evening everyone. Today I had a visit from three nice officers at my practice, who had a search warrant with them.

The accusation is that I had issued unauthorized Medical Exemption certificates.

One certificate was a forgery, you could see that clearly on the certificate.

With two others we could not determine whether the patients had been visiting us.

Thirdly, the patient's file was photographed by the police.

All in all, very nice and insightful police officers.

Wasn't a big problem, thank you very much for that.

And ... um ... now I have ask myself, how it is possible to issue incorrect medical certificates if there is no medical reason for someone to carry a certificate?

So from my point of view, everyone has the RIGHT to a medical certificate, and every doctor who refuses to do so violates the medical code, because these masks demonstrably – now also in the police report, in addition to the known report of the Federal Office for Medicines and in the Federal Office of Public Health – do not help against viruses, and they also do not protect against them.

And there are actually an overwhelming number of medical records out there that confirm that one is harmed by the masks, that they are of no use, and that more and more people are suffering from respiratory diseases since the introduction of the mask requirement, and from mycosis, lung congestion and the like.

So these masks endanger human lives, probably kill people, too.

And from my point of view, every doctor who does not issue a certificate, regardless, for whatever reason, is making a mistake from my point of view.

Personally, I don't really care.

I can look at myself in the mirror, and I stand by the fact, that I advise everyone against wearing a mask because it endangers his health, and this PROVEN...

Have a nice evening.
