Snippets from video:

“...This means there has been a huge, gigantic, legal philosophical shift on the German constitutional court. It is no longer willing to look the other way. And the question now is, why? What has changed

[...]

In other words, reading between the lines a bit, Germany is sick and tired of paying the consequences for Mr. Globaloney's policies...

[...]

In other words, again, the German court has ordered the European Central Bank to prove legally that it has the jurisdiction and authority to take the policy decisions it has taken...”

What's in the water in Karlsruhe? Because the German supreme court is on a tear through the EU...
