Dr. Tom Cowan Interviews Marvin Haberland, the German Engineer Who Deliberately Got Himself Fined for Not Wearing a Mask as a Strategy for Challenging Virology's Flawed "Science" in Court

by Dr. Tom Cowan
November 10, 2022

Hi, everyone. I consider today's podcasts one of the most important ones I've done. My guest is a young German man, Marvin Haberland, and our conversation revolves around his upcoming court case in Germany, as well as the foundations of virology.

Marvin is an engineer who, as a result of a health tragedy in his family, decided to take a deep look at medicine. That exploration led him eventually to virology. Like many of us, he discovered that the foundations of virology are based on anti-scientific misconceptions. Unlike most of us, he decided to do something about this realization. He proceeded to deliberately get himself fined for not wearing a mask, which gained him entry into the German court system. He intends to base his entire case on the anti-scientific methods of virology, specifically, the lack of controls.

He is confident enough in his understanding of these issues that he readily agreed to have me "cross-examine" him, essentially, having me take the side of the virologist. Marvin had no trouble answering any question I put to him. Tune in, and you will gain a further understanding of the massive anti-scientific nature of the entire field of virology.

All the best,
Tom

[Video available at Dr. Tom Cowan's BitChute and Rumble channels.]

Connect with Dr. Tom Cowan

See related:

German Engineer Marvin Haberland Challenges the Existence of Covid Virus in German Court

---