One of two Facebook Insiders featured in Project Veritas' recent #ExposeFacebook series that revealed the company's censorship of vaccine concerns on a global scale has officially come out of the shadows.

- Data Center Technician Morgan Kahmann felt compelled to speak out publicly and shine a light on Facebook's decision to hide their censorship plans from users.

- Kahmann informed Project Veritas of a Facebook decision to suspend and remove him from his office pending an "Investigatory Meeting" with Human Resources. Meeting was called off at the last minute.

- Kahmann: "What happened was I was at work, and I got a message from my supervisor, out of the blue, basically saying 'go ahead and wrap up your area and clean up your stuff, gather your personal belongings and meet me in a meeting room in the lobby of the building.' They're basically going to have me meet with the investigative team and grill me on this whole situation."

- Kahmann was able to secure additional internal Facebook documents before his suspension that confirm the "vaccine hesitancy" algorithm is live and being implemented globally across Facebook and Instagram platforms.

- Kahmann hopes more are inspired to Be Brave, and Do Something about the wrongdoing they witness inside Big Tech, media, and government.

Kahmann is one of two Facebook insiders that came to Project Veritas with this information, and he explained in an interview how he found out about his suspension.

"What happened was I was at work, and I got a message from my supervisor, out of the blue, basically saying 'go ahead and wrap up your area and clean up your stuff, gather your personal belongings and meet me in a meeting room in the lobby of the building,'" Kahmann said. "They're basically going to have me meet with the investigative team and grill me on this whole situation."

Kahmann also explained to Project Veritas what motivated him to blow the whistle on Facebook's wrongdoing in the first place.

"What would happen if this [Facebook Vaccine Hesitancy Comment Demotion policy] was scaled larger and scaled to Twitter and the internet as a whole is way worse than anything that could happen from me getting fired from my job," he said. "To me, that, it far outweighs that. Because it's about more than me. It's about really everyone in the world."

Before being suspended, Kahmann secured additional internal Facebook documents showing that the Big Tech giant's "vaccine hesitancy" policy has now been fully implemented.

He says that by doing what he did, more brave patriots working inside powerful institutions will come forward when they witness corruption.

"I think that the main reason why people don't want to come out [as whistleblowers] – because what if I, you know, I have two kids, I have my wife, and if I lose my job, it's like 'what do I do?' But that's less of a concern to me."
