They tell us these are normal clouds that have been around forever and we are just too stupid to remember them:

Yeeeah, ok...

It's utterly idiotic. For those of us who have old school photo albums, you know, the kind with actual photographs and polaroid's in a binder, these clouds are nowhere to be seen.

There is no photo of grandpa on his wedding day in 1940 with this in the background:

There's no giant d*ck in the sky pics:

What causes clouds to make shapes and patterns is blasting them with frequency:

"Agent, how do you know the clouds are changing from frequency?", you ask. To which I reply, "Great question! The answer is, because we see the exact same thing when water is blasted with frequency". Here's a little 1-minute video. There's thousands of these videos on the internet, but I picked the shortest one: (1 minute 13 second video)

Throughout the video we see the water forming the identical shapes as the clouds:

Unless you have a severe learning disability or are a shill, working for the government (redundant wording?), it's not hard to tell that this:
