Question:

Is highly toxic dimethylamine now being sprayed into our skies?

Consider this, patent number 202-203-12691, October 6, 2022.
Method for rain cloud formation using airborne dimethylamine injection.

In this patent, a process is described wherein said nucleation is catalyzed by the injection of a chemical substance dimethylamine into the upper atmosphere, preferably through injection of said substance into an electron-rich aircraft engine exhaust.

The subsequent formation of negatively charged ions has a catalytic effect on the generation of cloud condensation nuclei.

But governments would never subject their populations to geoengineering jet-sprayed toxic elements, would they?

Look up for your answer.

So just how toxic is dimethylamine?

Here's how bad it is from newjersey.gov.health.

Hazard summary: Dimethylamine can affect you when breathed in and passing through your skin. Dimethylamine can irritate and cause severe burns of the skin.

Contact can severely irritate and burn the eyes with possible permanent damage, corneal opacities, causing blindness. Breathing dimethylamine can irritate the nose and throat along with the lungs, causing coughing and or shortness of breath. Higher exposures can cause a buildup of fluid in the lungs, aka pulmonary edema. Repeated exposure may damage the liver.

Dimethylamine is also highly flammable.

Anyone remember Lahaina?

Dimethylamine is a colorless gas with an ammonia-like odor.

And now climate engineering patents are promoting spraying dimethylamine into our skies?

How can you hold your breath?
