I Looked Up

I stood willingly and gladly in the characters of everything
- other people, trees, clouds.
And this is what I learned,
that the world's otherness is antidote to confusion
- that standing within this otherness
- the beauty and the mystery of the world,
out in the fields or deep inside books can re-dignify the worst-stung heart.

I looked up and there it was among the green branches of the pitchpines — thick bird, a ruffle of fire trailing over the shoulders and down the back — color of copper, iron, bronze — lighting up the dark branches of the pine.

What misery to be afraid of death. What wretchedness, to believe only in what can be proven.

When I made a little sound it looked at me, then it looked past me.

Then it rose, the wings enormous and opulent,

and, as I said, wreathed in fire.
