On Tuesday, Robert F. Kennedy, Jr. joined hundreds of health freedom advocates in Sacramento to call for change in our government's handling of vaccine safety issues. In a climate where parents who question the "vaccines are safe and effective" mantra of the pharmaceutical industry and federal health agencies are being bullied and censored at alarming rates, Mr. Kennedy gave a moving speech on the need to depoliticize the vaccination debate. He also addressed the growing lack of faith among Americans in our public health officials with their ongoing obfuscation of the very real risks that are inherent in any of the 72 vaccines now being recommended for children in this country. Mr. Kennedy's speech starts at the 1 hour, 30-minute mark.
