RFK, Jr. spoke Thursday to a packed ballroom at the Autism One Conference about the issues facing vaccine safety science, censorship of the medical freedom movement by a pharma-bought media and how industry interests have also corrupted our government – with democracy hanging in the balance.

After discussing politics, media, pharma, environment and children's health, RFK, Jr. ends by saying that this generation's potential has been robbed.

He ended by saying to parents,

"What are we doing to the children in this country?...Whatever happens to me, I'm going to fight this because it's the worst thing I've ever seen.

I know your lives are so taken up in caring for these kids and it's very, very difficult for you to find the time and the resources to devote to activism. But we have to do this.

You are the army and we've got to take back our country."
