History has made clear that all empires eventually spiral out of control and collapse. Will populations take pause and examine the wider horizon? Indonesia has yet again been the victim of “nature’s fury”. But, is there more to the story? Solid data from globally recognized science sources leads to conclusions that truly test the limits of comprehension. A new report from the current US administration in the White House concludes climate collapse is inevitable, so we might as well keep polluting. Growing power structure desperation is pushing us ever closer to WWIII, what new forms of biological warfare might we face? The latest installment of Global Alert News is below.

Many have already given up in the battle to sound that alarm and save what is yet left of our once thriving planet. But does sitting the sidelines truly bring peace? Or does true solace only exist in renewing one's determination to press on in this epic fight for the greater good? The undercurrent of climate engineering awareness is much more vast than is yet
