My talk with journalist Cheryll Jones on Coast to Coast AM is scheduled for late in the evening of this coming Thursday, the 29th. Please stay up late and join us, won't you? It's too hot to sleep anyway!

Marvin Herndon, PhD, my science advisor Ginny Silcox and I will be presenting as part of the second annual Children's Health Defense 'Attack on Food and Farmers' online symposium Sept. 6 & 7. Other presenters include Robert F. Kennedy, Jr., James Corbett, Dr. Meryl Nass, Catherine Austin Fitts and Dr. Sherri Tenpenny. This is going to be BIG!

Dr. Harland Cleveland (1918-2008) is honored with a whole section in my book. The only individual more honored in my book is Vice Admiral William Raborn, who has an entire chapter. Cleveland publicly advocated for global weather control at the highest levels of world power. As we are interested in exposing chemtrails, which play a central role in today's global weather modification operations, let us take a closer look at Dr. Cleveland. For the whole story, please buy and read my book Chemtrails Exposed: A New Manhattan Project.

Cleveland was the U.S. ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), a Rhodes Scholar and, along with his brother Harold van Buren Cleveland (1917-1993), a CFR member.

He served as Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs, a United Nations relief administrator in China and Italy, and a foreign aid manager under the Marshall Plan. In his role as an Assistant Secretary of State during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, Cleveland was apparently instrumental in the founding of the UN's World Weather Watch as well as outer space treaties and international arrangements to divvy up the electromagnetic frequency spectrum.

Dr. Cleveland was also the chairman of a government group called the Weather Modification Advisory Board. In the spring of 1978, the Weather Modification Advisory Board finished their report titled "Weather Modification: Programs, Problems, Policy, and Potential." Among many other findings, the 746-page report stated that, "It will soon be possible to influence the weather more reliably and in a much greater variety of ways."

One year previously, during House weather modification hearings, Dr. Cleveland had advocated for more national and international weather modification efforts as he spoke of electromagnetic energy modifying the weather. He said, "The review here is an informal general theory of what kind of changes can be wrought in the atmospheric environment by what the experts call brute force, by seeding of various kinds in different circumstances – at the moment with chemical agents, perhaps in the future with forms of electromagnetic energy..." The Weather Modification Advisory Board submitted a paper to these proceedings in which they reiterated Mr. Cleveland's assertion about using electromagnetic energy to modify the weather. The global use of electromagnetic energy to modify the weather is the distinguishing aspect of today's New Manhattan Project.

In 1976, the MITRE Corporation sponsored the Aspen Institute's Symposium on Living with Climatic Change. Dr. Cleveland's talk was titled "The Climate for a New World Order." The gist of his speech was that the validity of the science of man-made climate change is not important because the theory is simply a good way to bring about a necessary, authoritarian New World Order. He said, "There are two options, each of them backed by weighty evidence, or at least by weighty meteorologists. One is that the weather is getting warmer. The other is that the weather is getting colder. You can pay your scientists and take your choice." Cleveland served as the director of international affairs at the Aspen Institute from 1974 to 1980.

Cleveland was a long-time, staunch supporter of a program of global weather control and he asserted his support many times. In his 1977 book The Third Try at World Order, Cleveland writes that, "the international control of weather modification had better be just around the corner." In this book Cleveland also writes that a concerned 'community of nations' needs to, among many other things, "control the modification of weather at human command." He writes that, "It is this impressive agenda, taken as a whole, that will amount to a third try at world order." Further still in this book, Cleveland writes that new or adapted international institutions are needed to, "collect and disseminate better information and guesses about the weather – and move toward international standards for weather modification." He characterizes this proposed effort as, "among the most urgent systems waiting to be born." In a short 1978 piece titled "The Management of Weather Resources," Cleveland once again advocated for weather modification. During the 1980s, Cleveland served two three-year terms as a trustee at large of the University Corporation for Atmospheric Research (UCAR) in Boulder, Colorado, which is heavily implicated in today's New Manhattan Project. In Cleveland's 1990 book The Global Commons: Policy for the Planet, he writes, "As the sciences and technologies create the capacity to modify the weather at human command, new concepts of law and practice will have to be invented to match humankind's new power to change its physical surround.”

As it became a big political issue, Cleveland became a staunch supporter of the theory of man-made global warming. He stated the problem and supported the proposed solution. In his 1993 book Birth of a New World: An Open Moment for International Leadership, Cleveland wrote, “Global warming already looms as the biggest environmental issue on the political horizon.” In the same book, he noted that, “Some short-term weather can be modified at human command.” Today’s geoengineers propose similar scenarios.
