

The Galactic Tribunal Grills Bill Gates

The Galactic Tribunal Grills Bill Gates

by Jon Rappoport, No More Fake News

September 14, 2021

We don't know how Bill Gates was transported to a Galactic proceeding, and we only have fragments of the interrogation. But because no court on Earth would deliver justice, those distant powers intervened.

A judge read an unusual opening statement, which apparently is presented before every trial:

"In our high civilization, we've fulfilled the ancient prophecy, THE LOST SHALL BE FOUND. There is no barrier between those of us who live here in the flesh and those most close to us who've departed this life. We experience joy with them in dimensions far greater than this. Why then do we bother to conduct these trials? Because we also fight for justice. We will not turn our backs on that ideal."

FRAGMENT 1: ...Mr. Gates, it's time for the truth. How long did you plan the pandemic before launching it?

Why am I forced to tell the truth?

Because this is a place for conscience.

Will you torture me if I decline?

We'll keep asking until you answer honestly, no matter how long it takes.

Who can I pay? I'm rich.

Denied. We don't want money.

How about land? I can deliver you a large colony on Earth. A whole country. Maybe even Europe.

No.

I could create a medical system for you that would dazzle your minds. On Earth, the Nobel Committee should give me the Prize for my efforts, but they don't have the balls. Did Melinda put you up to kidnapping me? I demand my rights...

FRAGMENT 2: ...The pandemic narrative was simply the occasion for establishing a worldwide dictatorship?

We needed a pretext. There were many meetings over the course of 25 years. We decided early on that a medical story was our best option. It appears to be politically neutral.

On Earth, the modern religion is science.

Exactly. So if we could get out in front of that trend and create a medical scenario of threat and impending destruction, we could apply just enough coercion to control the population.

But you weren't conducting real science.

We were inventing the appearance of it. We had so-called experts in our camp. They would take the lead. The masses have no way of distinguishing science from fantasy...

FRAGMENT 3: In the planning stage prior to the declaration of a pandemic, what were the vital elements?

I'm most proud of our messaging organization. We had the news media. We had government leaders. We had recognized medical experts. But you see, in that type of operation, you can't afford defections. The seal has to be tight. Ours was. Over the years, through money, through influence, in some cases through threats, we had built a network of unity and compliance.

You're proud, you say?

Why, yes. It took work. Much work. You don't lock up all the key sources of information on a planet overnight.

So it was the message you were aiming for, rather than the truth.

Of course. There was no pandemic. We had to make it seem there was. Convincingly.

You were heading a sales force.

Exactly. The whole idea was to make the buying compulsory...

FRAGMENT 4: ...You had planned the lockdowns?

Years in advance. Then, at the right moment, China pulled the trigger, setting the example. When my World Health Organization praised China, other nations followed suit and imprisoned their populations.

So the Chinese regime's lockdowns were definitely part of the advance planning.

Yes. That was crucial. The government there wasn't fully on board with the globalist future we set our sights on. China is, first and foremost, for China. But we had enough cooperation from them to make it work.

And social media? You had them on your side from the beginning?

That was easy. Their leaders are willing and compliant. They're afraid to go against our medical consensus. And they're globalists. In the long run, they want world government, too.

As do the controlled media?

Yes. Putting the right people in place in the news industry has been a decades-long proposition.

You wanted a planet that was a prison.

Yes.

And the pretext again?

The scenario? There is a deadly virus sweeping across Earth, and in order to stop it, we have to lock down countries...and then inject everyone with a vaccine.

But there was no virus?

Among us, there were arguments on both sides of that question. But if it existed, it certainly wasn't any more dangerous than the flu. We had to make it seem very, very dangerous.

Through pronouncements to that effect.

Yes...

FRAGMENT 5: ...You want depopulation?

We have to have it. You can't run a planet when 8 billion people are living on it. It's impossible. The vaccine is the weapon. But not just the COVID vaccine. Vaccines before it and those coming in the future.

And all those deaths will be laid at the door of pandemics?

Yes. "The virus did it."

And you're willing to murder all those people.

Hard choices dictate the outcomes of events. A better life for some, rather than a terrible life for all. That's my choice.

Are you listening to yourself, Mr. Gates?

I always listen to myself.

FRAGMENT 6: ...I want to return to the messaging effect you created. It's difficult for us to understand how you managed it...why so many leaders in their fields went along with your false science.

It was a combination of things. Many people are true believers. Scientists talk, and they believe. Other people wanted money. We paid them money. Certain resistant politicians were threatened. We set an example with several assassinations. As you build a consensus, you reach a threshold where the tide is in your favor. Then people ride it with you, out of fear of excommunication if they don't. Media leaders were given to understand that the pandemic was the gateway into a global governance system. And the system was inevitable.

What about Anthony Fauci?

He's a little man, a striver, who wants to be accepted in elite circles. I recruited him a long time ago...

FRAGMENT 7: ...You yourself have given much money to media companies.

I praised their work, gave them money, and they showed loyalty to me. You see, life runs on stimulus-response. I make use of that principle on a worldwide basis. My colleagues and I provide calculated stimuli, and the population, in all areas of life, responds as we predict.

You view humans as machines.

Well, they are.

But you and your colleagues aren't.

We're of a higher order. We can stand outside stimulus-response and operate the levers.

As you sit here, Mr. Gates, you don't believe you're confessing to crimes. You're proud of what you've done.

Of course.

Listen to me carefully now. We know enough of what you are, in order to pass sentence on you. But we know a great more than that. Like every individual, you have a greater dimension. We could show it to you. We could compel you to experience it. If we did, you would come apart at the seams. You would understand your own evil actions in a way that is undeniable.

...I don't like the sound of that. What are you talking about?

I think you have an inkling of what I mean. The experience we could compel you to have is one you yourself, on your own, will come face to face with, some day. Not in your present life. Afterwards, at some point. There is no telling when, but it will happen.

You mean some supposed higher power will force it on me?

No, Mr. Gates. It's much worse than that. You'll force it on yourself.

Why would I do that?

Because although you've embraced crime and destruction, somewhere inside yourself you also understand The Good. And in that understanding, you can potentially live in joy and peace. As anyone can.

You're not making sense.

You're beginning to see I am making sense.

I don't like this.

Why would you like it, given what you've made of your life and lives of others?

You're trying to pass off some kind of religious nonsense on me.

Far from it. We don't have churches in this place, Mr. Gates. We don't need faith in things unseen. We've already seen.

I want to go home.

You will.

You're not going to kill me?

So you can blame us for what you're doing to yourself?

You're insane.

We've opened up just a bit of light here for you.

Why?

Because although we're a just people and don't need justice for ourselves, we will exercise it on behalf of others, who've been harmed.

This is ridiculous.

Even the worst murderers have it in themselves to become good. They can cross that bridge.

No they can't.

We can hear voices, Mr. Gates. Many voices are telling us to put you to death.

Then why don't you? Go ahead.

We're doing something much worse. We're imposing this sentence...YOUR FATE IS IN YOUR OWN HANDS. That sentence is real. It carries weight. As you'll discover.

It's meaningless.

Take Mr. Gates away. He's about to become ill. Take him home...

You don't have the courage to kill me. You're cowards.

I've heard that refrain from hundreds of murderers in this court...they all want a quick death. We don't give it to them...

Kill me.

Take him home.

You did something to my mind.

We heard your confession of crimes. Mass imprisonment and murder.

Then destroy me. I throw myself on the mercy of this court.

Goodbye, Mr. Gates.

This is just a dream.

If it is, it's your dream. You have to ask why you're presenting it to yourself...

Connect with Jon Rappoport

cover image based on the work of AlCafel / Wikimedia Commons