

The Non-Existent Virus: It Undercuts All Other Stories

In this article, I continue to trace the implications of the missing virus; I'm referring to the fact the no one has proved SARS-CoV-2 exists.

Here I take a wider look at the situation.

Apparently, the notion of a virus was born when germ theorists ran out of bacteria to explain illnesses. So they claimed there had to be a smaller invisible particle, which came to be called "virus."

Since that fateful choice, researchers have encountered various problems. Chief among them: how do you to prove, in specific instances, that these viruses exist and cause illness?

Flashing forward—two modern avenues of proof have been invented. One, twist and reverse the meaning of "isolation." And two, sequence the genetic structure of viruses by using pre-set computer programs to build, out of thin air, without justification, collections of genetic information, ending up with nothing more than virtual entities.

In past articles, I've analyzed and rejected both avenues of "research."

In the first case, there is the unjustified presumption that the virus is contained in a soup in a dish in a lab, and this is called “isolation,” when it is actually non-isolation. In the second case, there is no true sequencing. It’s all made up out of unmerited supposition and guesswork.

However, 99.9% of mainstream scientists are true believers in their own methods and fabrications. They actually accept what they’re doing as science.

Therefore, in virology labs all over the world—including bio-weapons facilities—THE RESEARCHERS HAVE NO IDEA WHAT THEY’RE DOING. THEY DON’T KNOW HOW FAR FROM REALITY THEY ACTUALLY ARE.

THEY HAVE NO CLUE AS TO THE ABSURDITY OF THEIR OWN WORK.

They’re taken in and fooled and bamboozled by their own theories.

It’s as if explorers tasked with mapping the moon, on site, up close and personal, are carrying out their jobs in underground coal mines. And they don’t recognize there is a problem.

The tenth of one percent of the researchers who do see a problem understand they have to keep their mouths shut.

Am I claiming, with finality, that ALL “viruses” have no physical existence? No. At least, not yet. That’s an open question.

In the case of SARS-CoV-2, I see no legitimate evidence for its existence.

And what’s worse, scientists are hypnotized by their own assumptions; and therefore, they’re immune from re-thinking what they’re doing.

It certainly wouldn’t be the first time a system trapped the practitioners working inside it.

It’s how you train humans to be robots.

At first, the humans follow the rules that define the system.

Then they graduate to enforcing the rules. Their minds become excessively literal. They view alternatives as heresies.

"Sir, you have no idea what you're doing. You think you're discovering new viruses. You think you're manipulating them to create new forms."

"Don't bother me, I'm busy."

"You're saying non-isolation is isolation. You're using algorithms to invent 'viruses' made up of irrelevant data. They're data constructs, nothing more."

"You're a blasphemer. Don't bother me, I'm busy."

"You're fiddling with processes that have nothing to do with what you think they have to do with..."

"How did you get into my lab?"

"I brought a camera crew. We want to film and document every single step you take to 'discover a new virus'."

"Absolutely not. You're not official. This is a high-security facility."

"In other words, sight unseen, we have to accept your claims as if they were law."

"Yes, that's the rule. We're not running a debating society. We're doing science."

"But you see, that's the point. You're NOT doing science."

"What are you saying?"

"You have no idea what you're doing. You THINK you're discovering new viruses. You BELIEVE you're manipulating them. But you're only working with self-generated fantasies."

"I'll tell you what. I'll inject you with one of these fantasies and let's see what happens."

"You don't possess an actual specimen of an isolated and purified virus, separated from all other material."

"Here it is, in this dish."

"No. LOOK AT IT. In that dish, there's a soup. It contains human and monkey cells, toxic drugs and chemicals, and other genetic material. It's the furthest thing from 'isolated'."

"We know the virus is there. Some of the cells are dying. The virus must be doing the killing."

"No. The toxic drugs and chemicals could be doing the killing. Furthermore, the cells are being starved of nutrients. That alone can explain their death. Think it through."

"There's nothing to think about. Our procedures have been verified by thousands of studies and published scientific papers."

"Consensus is not the same thing as truth."

"Security, come to the lab. We have a non-certified intruder. Escort him from the premises."

"That's your bottom line?"

"Our work is classified. You're a civilian. We pronounce; you obey."

"And that's science?"

"Absolutely. Didn't they teach you that in school?"

"YOU HAVE NO IDEA WHAT YOU'RE DOING IN THIS LAB. You're a prisoner of your own illusions."

"Security, hurry it up. This man is a subversive..."

"Suppose you believe you're working with viruses, but you're only working with IDEAS AND STORIES ABOUT VIRUSES?"

"What do you mean?"

"You're not really isolating anything. And you're not sequencing anything. The sequences are just INFORMATION cobbled together from genetic reference libraries by computer programs. It's all, at best, a digital metaphor for what you believe exists. You're generating fairy tales."

"Even if that were true, it would be the closest we could come to reality. Nothing is perfect."

"A rock is perfect. You see it, you kick it, you sit on it."

"Viruses are very small."

"Even more reason to be sure you're dealing with something actual."

"We use PCR technology."

"But it only looks for a piece of RNA you ASSUME comes from 'the virus'. Since you don't have an isolated and purified virus, you have no reason to assume the RNA comes from 'the virus'."

"Security, take this man to his car. Take the film crew with him. They have no right to be here. This is a government-funded facility. Private citizens have no access to government."

CHIEF SECURITY OFFICER: "Actually, I'd like to hear the rest of the conversation. My sister just took the vaccine to protect her against 'the virus', and now she's in the hospital..."
