“...You create, which is to conceive images in your mind – of nothing more than images that go in there combined with reason and intent. Intent being defined as a bending of the mind towards an image. And what’s an image?

An image is just a representation – a symbol to your mind.

Until you give authority to one of your creations by believing in it. Believing, of course, being yet another power in the form of energy.

That’s all it is. An imaginary future.

So why not imagine something else?

Hey, did you know in our old dictionary the word life was also defined as energy?”
